

intelligent systems for molecular biology (ISMB 2006)

the 14th annual meeting of the international society for computational biology (iscb)

ISMB is considered by many past sponsors as the Premier Life Sciences Conference to attend. Preeminent computational biologists and bio-IT executives from around the world gather annually for the world's largest bioinformatics conference. ISMB provides one of the best opportunities for sponsors and exhibitors to showcase software and hardware technologies to an international audience.

ISMB 2006 is hosted by Embrapa (Brazilian Agricultural Research Corporation) and LNCC/MCT (National Laboratory for Scientific Computation of the Science and Technology Ministry of Brazil) Fortaleza, Brazil, August 6 - 10.

This multidisciplinary conference brings together scientists from molecular biology, medicine, computer science, mathematics and statistics. The scope of ISMB encompasses the development and application of advanced computational methods for biological problems at the levels of sequences, cells, organs, and organisms.
